PREFACE

The Commercial Sector of the Brazilian Embassy in Greece is pleased to present the Commercial Directory Brazil-Greece 2012.

The Directory gathers information and data on the Brazilian and Greek economies of interest to the business community which are active in the trade sector between the two countries.

Of particular relevance is the catalog of the Brazilian and Greek companies which already operate in the importing and exporting market of both countries. Equally relevant for agents active in the international business is the Calendar of Exhibitions and Fairs that will take place in Brazil in 2012 in different economic sectors.

The Commercial Directory Brazil-Greece will complement the commercial information available in the electronic site of the Embassy (<http://atenas.itamaraty.gov.br>) and in Brazilglobalnet's database (www.brasilglobalnet.gov.br).

1.1. INTRODUCTION

Brazil, the largest country in Latin America, covers an area of 8.5 million square km, with a population of more than 180 million people. Occupying over 50% of South America's total landmass, Brazil shares borders with all countries in the region, except Chile and Ecuador.

Discovered by the Portuguese in 1500, politically independent since 1822, and a Republic since 1889, Brazil is a constitutional democracy. A multiracial nation formed by immigrants from many world regions. Brazil has a long tradition as a conflict-free country. A defender of international law and of the peaceful solution for problems between nations. Brazil's diplomacy has been pro-active in the furthering of peace, economic development and equitable trade relations.

Brazil, a major producer and exporter of very diversified goods, stands among the top 8 world economies, with a 2010 GDP of US$ 2.01 trillion (7.5% growth over 2009). Most of its manufacturing capacity is directed to the production of traditional and technologically advanced products, such as transport equipment, chemicals, metallurgical and mechanical goods, textiles, food products, electrical and communication equipment.

In 2010, Brazilian foreign trade registered the peak mark of US$ 383.6 billion in its flow, a growth by 36.6% over 2009, when US$ 280.7 billion were traded.

Exports reached US$ 201.9 billion, and imports were US$ 181.6 billion. Considering 2009, exports increased 32.0% and imports by 42.2%. Those significant growth indicate the resumption of Brazilian external sales and the national economy recovery, after 2009's economic global crisis.

The trade surplus in 2010 reached US$ 20.3 billion, a value 19.8% lower than the one registered in 2009, of US$ 25.3 billion, due to a higher increase on imports to supply growing demand in the internal market.

Source: SECOMGRE

Compared to 2009, the exports of basic goods increased by 45.3%, and semi-manufactured goods and manufactured goods exports increased, respectively, 37.6% and 18.1%. Industrialized goods represented over half (55.7%) of the exports composition in the period.

In the imports side, the acquisitions of raw materials and industrial supplies and materials represented 46.2% of the total, and capital goods imports, 22.6%, showing strong correlation with productive investments. Consumer goods represented 17.3% and fuel and oil, 13.9%. In the period under analysis, the imports of fuel and oil increased 51.3%, followed by the imports of consumer goods (+46.0%), raw materials and industrial supplies and materials (+40.4%) and capital goods (+38.0%).

In the first half of 2011, Brazilian foreign trade registered the peak mark of US$ 223.6 billion in its flow, a growth by 30.1% over the same period of 2010, when US$ 170.5 billion were traded.

Exports reached US$ 118.3 billion, and imports were US$ 105.3 billion, also peak marks. Considering 2010, exports increased 31.6% and imports by 28.5%. Those significant growths indicate the progressive solidity of Brazilian insertion in the international commerce.

Considering destination markets, Asia has been a prominent destination for Brazilian products. Exports increased 37.9%, placing the region in the first position for Brazilian products in 2011, surpassing Latin America and The Caribbean and the European Union, whose growth has also presented expressive rates of 23.9% and 31.4% respectively.

Regarding Greece, the volume of trade with Brazil is below the potential of both countries. The trade flow, concentrated in a few products, reached 242.9 million euros in 2010. Expanding trade to other economic sectors can be a way to improve the trade flow between the countries.

This directory aims to serve as a tool for this purpose. The information here compiled, especially those related to the contents of Brazilian and Greek companies already making business in each other market can be used as a preliminary source for those interested in the Brazilian-Greek commercial relations.

Additionally, the Trade Promotion Department of the Brazilian Ministry of External Relations disposes of a very useful electronic trade promotion system which is now considered the most complete tool of its kind in Latin America: the BrasilGlobalNet, where over 55 thousand foreign companies and 18.000 Brazilian companies are doing business free of cost. The system can be accessed at www.brasilglobalnet.gov.br.

BRAZILIAN EXPORTS TO GREECE

The volume of Brazilian exports to Greece has not changed significantly in the last years. In the past decade, Brazil's participation in the Greek imports amounts to around 1% and has been concentrated in a few products. In 2010, for example, only five items were responsible for approximately 80% of the total amount exported to Greece: coffee (35.03% of total exports), soya (26.15%), tobacco (11.6%), footwear (3.91%) and sugar (2.08%).

10 MAIN PRODUCTS EXPORTED FROM BRAZIL TO GREECE - 2010 -

GREEK EXPORTS TO BRAZIL

The value of Greek exports to Brazil amounted to US$ 67,8 million in 2010. This value represented an increase of almost 100% in relation to the previous year but still remained concentrated in a few products such as diesel oil (60%), marble and travertine (13%) and olive oil (10%). These three products represented more than 80% of the total greek exports to Brazil.
